RULE for Crown Solicitors (Ireland) in relation to Jurors.

The following Rule has been now issued to Crown Solicitors in substitution for the Rule heretofore in force.

The Crown Solicitor shall procure from the Sheriff some time before the day appointed for the commencement of each Assizes, a true list of the jury summoned; and for the purpose of duly exercising the right of the Crown to direct jurors to stand by, and, if need be, to challenge for cause, the Crown Solicitor shall make due inquiries in reference to the persons summoned; and when in any case he shall have sufficient reason to believe that any person coming to be sworn as a juror, is open to challenge for affinity to the person on trial, partiality, bodily or mental infirmity rendering him unfit to serve as a juror, or other sufficient ground on which a challenge for cause, if made, could be sustained, he shall direct such juror to stand by. He shall also, in the exercise of a due discretion, direct to stand by all such persons as he shall have reason to believe are likely to be hindered from giving an impartial verdict, by favour towards the accused, or fear of the consequences to their persons, property or trade, although same may not admit of legal proof; and (in the discharge of this duty) the Crown Solicitor will not interfere unless the circumstances of the case require it, and will then act with due care and caution, but also with promptness and decision, and, if time permit, should consult the leading Crown Counsel in the case. In all cases of peculiar local excitement in any particular town or district of the county, it will be prudent, if the panel permit, to set aside all persons returned from such locality.

In making the inquiries hereinbefore directed, the Crown Solicitor shall not inquire into the religious or political opinions or the calling of any juror; and no person shall be directed to stand by on account of his religious or political opinions, or of his calling.

Rule heretofore in force for which the above Rule is substituted.

The Crown Solicitor shall procure from the Sheriff some time before the day appointed for the commencement of each Assizes a true list of the jury summoned; and for the purpose of duly exercising the right of the Crown to direct jurors to stand by, and, if need be, to challenge for cause, the Crown Solicitor shall make due inquiries in reference to the persons summoned; and when in any case he shall have sufficient reason to believe that any person coming to be sworn as a juror, is open to challenge for affinity to the person on trial, partiality, bodily or mental infirmity rendering him unfit to serve as a juror, or other sufficient ground on which a challenge, if made, could be sustained, he shall direct such juror to stand by; and he shall also, in the exercise of a due discretion, direct to stand by all such persons as he shall have reason to believe are likely to be hindered from giving an impartial verdict, by favour towards the accused, fear of the consequences to their persons, property or trade, or other improper motive although same may not amount to a legal ground of challenge, or may not admit of legal proof; and in the discharge of this duty the Crown Solicitors will not interfere unless the circumstances of the case require it, and will then act with due care and caution, but also with promptness and decision, and, if time permit, should consult the leading Crown Counsel in the case. In all cases of peculiar local excitement in any particular town or district of the county, it will be prudent, if the panel permit, to set aside all persons returned from such locality.

* NOTE.—No nearer statistical approximation can be given to the Number of Tenants and Sub-Tenants finally turned out of their holdings. But it is to be recollected that this approximation must be considerably in excess of the number permanently evicted, since this table merely shows the number of Tenants and Sub-Tenants turned out of their holdings, and not re-admitted on the same day, without giving any indication as to the number of these who may or may not afterwards be re-admitted as Tenants, Sub-Tenants, or Caretakers.

REPORT, 1892.

Irish Land Commission,
Agricultural Department,
Dublin, March 28th, 1893.

Sir,

I have the honour to inform you that in accordance with your instructions, the Agricultural Department of the Irish Land Commission carried out a series of experiments during the late summer and autumn of 1892 for the purpose of testing the value of applications of sulphate of copper to the potato plant as a preventive of potato disease.

Districts selected.

The farms upon which the experiments were conducted were situated as follows :—

Two near Tralee, county Kerry.
Two near Clonakilty, county Cork.
Two near Tramore, county Waterford.
Three near Brookeboro', county Fermanagh.

All these experiments were carried out under the superintendence of Mr. A. William West, M.R.A.C., of this Department.

Further experiments were conducted by Mr. W. A. Barnes, of Westlands, Moynalty, Kells, County Meath, and by the Dungannon Board of Guardians, both being carried out in accordance with instructions given by this Department.

Particulars as to Experimental Plots.

In all cases the champion variety of potato was selected for experiment, being the variety most generally grown for home consumption in Ireland. At each experimental station five quarter acre plots were carefully measured out; plots 1 to 4 were treated with the mixtures described in the following table; plot 5 was left untreated as a check plot :—

	2 per cent. of Copper Sulphate.		1½ per cent. of Copper Sulphate.

In all the experiments except No. 9 (Brookeboro') the plots were dressed three times at intervals of about three weeks; in experiment No. 9 the dressing was only applied once.

Care was taken in marking off the plots that they should be as nearly as possible similar with respect to soil, seed used, and general treatment before and during the growth of the crops, but the soil varied considerably in the plots used for experiment No. 6 at Tramore, and for experiment No. 2 at Ardfert Abbey, the plots in the first instance being subject to springs, and those in the second case being partly situated on the slope of a rather steep hill.

Materials used for dressing.

The sulphate of copper used was that known as pure sulphate of copper, and was supplied by Mr. Samuel Boyd, of 46, Mary-street, Dublin. A sample, drawn from the sulphate of copper sent out for the purposes of the experiments, was submitted to Sir Charles A. Cameron, Analyst to the City and County of Dublin, and was certified by him to be of 98·5 per cent. of purity.

Sir Charles Cameron reported as follows :—

"City Laboratory,
"Municipal Buildings, Cork Hill,
"Dublin, July 20th, 1892.

"I have analysed a specimen of sulphate of copper submitted to me for that purpose by the Irish Land Commission, the only impurity present is sulphate of iron. The amount of iron present is 0·49 per cent. which would give an equivalent of 0·7 per cent. of peroxide of iron. The exact amount of pure sulphate of copper present is 98·5 per cent.

"(Signed), CHARLES A. CAMERON."

The lime used was thoroughly well-burned, unslacked lime.

The treacle used was supplied by Mr. Samuel Boyd, of Mary-street.

Method of preparing the Mixtures used.

The spraying mixtures were prepared as follows :—

The requisite amount of copper sulphate was set to dissolve over night by placing it in a piece of coarse sacking, suspended in a wooden barrel containing two gallons of cold water to every pound of copper sulphate, or if this could not conveniently be done, the copper sulphate was ground to powder previous to being placed in water; when thus powdered it dissolves in a few minutes in cold water; the correct amount of unslacked lime was then placed in a bucket, and water was added until the lime would absorb no more; upon the whole of the lime being thoroughly slacked, sufficient water was added thereto to thoroughly cool the lime, producing a thin milk of lime, which was well stirred and then poured slowly into the copper sulphate solution, this mixture was then stirred for several minutes, after which sufficient cold water was added to dilute it to the required strength, the whole being continuously stirred. After thorough stirring, the mixture appeared azure blue in colour, it was then allowed to rest in order that the precipitate should sink; if after standing for a few minutes the precipitate sank leaving a few inches in depth of clear liquid it was considered ready for use, but if the liquid to the depth mentioned instead of appearing clear was slightly tinged with blue, the mixture was again thoroughly stirred and allowed to rest a second time. This second stirring generally produced the desired effect, but if, as occurred in one or two instances, it did not, more lime was added, the bluish tinge showing that the whole of the copper had not been thoroughly precipitated; the addition of a few ounces of lime was found sufficient in each instance to bring about the desired result. On being tested with litmus paper, the mixture as thus prepared proved to be free from acidity.

Proportion of Lime used.

It will be observed by reference to the Table on page 3 that the proportion of lime to copper sulphate used was as 1 to 2 on plots 1 and 2; and as 1 to 3 on plots 3 and 4; it was found that if the lime was thoroughly good, the latter proportion was sufficient to neutralize all acid, and to precipitate all the copper. Unless the acidity of the copper sulphate is neutralized the mixture would be injurious to the leaves of the potato plant, therefore, if the lime used is not of very good quality, it is advisable to use it in the proportion of one part of lime to two parts of copper sulphate.

When preparing the treacle mixture, sufficient water was added to the required amount of treacle to make it of a thin consistency, the diluted treacle was then added to the milk of lime, and after being thoroughly stirred, the mixture was poured into the copper solution in the barrel, the whole being again thoroughly stirred.

The object of adding treacle to the mixture applied to two of the plots in each experiment, was to ascertain whether the addition of treacle to the sulphate of copper mixture as recommended by M. Perret and M. Girard, would produce more satisfactory results than the applications of the ordinary bouillie bordelaise, M. Girard's experiments tending to show that the sucrated mixture was less liable to be washed off the potato leaves by rain.

Method and Cost of Application

The mixture was applied by means of the "Eclair" Knapsack Spraying Machine made by Vermorel, a full description of which appeared in the report of the experiments of a similar nature conducted by this Department in 1891. The machines, which cost 35*s.* each, proved most satisfactory in every respect.

The mixtures were prepared in the fields in which the experiments were carried out, forty gallon wooden paraffin barrels being used for the purpose.

In most of the experiments three machines were kept constantly at work ; at other times two, four, or five machines were used. From the experience thus gained it was ascertained that one strong boy could attend three men operating the sprayers, the boy being employed to carry fresh supplies of the mixture to the operators from barrels placed on the headlands, the mixture being well stirred before drawing a fresh supply.

The mixture was applied to the plants both from above and from underneath, in every instance, except in experiment No. 5, the foliage of the crop in that instance being so rank, that it was found impossible to spray from underneath to any appreciable extent.

Time occupied in applying the Mixture.

In each experiment the actual time occupied in preparing and applying the mixture was noted down, and the following estimates of the cost of application to an average crop of champions, with fully developed stalks, is based upon the information thus obtained :—

Three men using "Eclair" Sprayers, attended by one boy, can apply 150 gallons to one statute acre in $5\frac{1}{4}$ hours.

If less than three men are employed the cost of attendance per acre is proportionately greater.

The price of the copper sulphate, delivered on the farm, may be estimated at 21*s.* per cwt., equal to $2\frac{1}{4}d.$ per lb., and the price of treacle at 1*d.* per lb.

The cost of labour may be estimated at 2*s.* per diem for each man, and 1*s.* per diem for the attendant boy. The working day is calculated at $10\frac{1}{2}$ hours.

The cost of each application per acre would be as follows :—

Digging the Plots.

During the first three weeks of October a statute perch in each plot was carefully measured off and the potatoes therein dug ; generally speaking, half a perch was taken in two different parts of each plot ; the sound potatoes were separated from the unsound ; the former were then further divided into two lots, one being marketable potatoes, fit for human consumption, the other lot being small potatoes, fit for feeding pigs, poultry, etc. The three lots were then separately weighed ; in many instances a considerable amount of the tubers in the untreated plots were found to have rotted away.*

General Remarks.

So far as could be judged by the eye the mixture without treacle remained on the leaves equally as long as that to which treacle had been applied.

In every instance the foliage of the treated plots remained green for from three to five weeks longer than that of the untreated plots.

The tubers dug in the treated plots were generally larger than those on the untreated plots, and the former when cooked and eaten were found to be of better quality than the latter.

Allowing for differences in quality of soil and uneven manuring, the general results of the experiments favour the application of a 2 per cent. mixture, without treacle.

About 150 gallons per acre is sufficient to dress thoroughly an average crop of champions with fully developed foliage, 80 to 100 gallons per acre is sufficient for a crop without much foliage. Much depends on the skill of the operator.

Experiment No. 9 tends to show that a single dressing applied at the proper time may be quite sufficient.

Potato disease was very prevalent in every district in which the experiments were conducted.

The following observations may be of use to those who desire to apply the mixture to their potato crops :—

1. It is desirable to spray the crop thoroughly immediately before the earliest period at which disease is likely to appear locally.

2. If possible select dry weather for applying the mixture, which will then dry and harden on the leaves.

3. Use pure sulphate of copper only, guaranteed 98 per cent. of purity ; ordinary commercial sulphate of copper contains a large amount of sulphate of iron, and should not be used.

4. Take care that the lime used is pure, well burnt, and unslacked.

5. Cold water should invariably be used in preparing the mixture ; hot water should not be used. The lime, after being slacked, should be quite cool before being added to the copper sulphate solution ; it may be cooled by adding cold water.

6. Iron vessels should not be used in preparing or handling the mixture—wooden or copper vessels should be used for such purposes.

7. Empty paraffin barrels have been found very suitable for the preparation of the mixture ; it will generally be found most convenient to prepare the mixture in the field in which it is to be used.

8. The mixture should be well stirred on each occasion before a fresh supply is drawn for the spraying machines.

9. The spraying machines should be oiled before being used : as there is a good deal of india-rubber in the working parts of the "Eclair," pure olive oil should be used for lubricating : ordinary machine oil should be avoided, as it frequently contains paraffin, which dissolves india-rubber.

10. The men using the sprayers should wear common oilskin trousers, or other suitable material to protect their clothes from wet.

11. It is desirable that the person attending the sprayers and supplying them with the mixtures, should be provided with a wooden or copper container made for carrying on the back, from which the knapsack machines could be filled, thus enabling the person supplying the sprayers with mixture to carry it to them with greater facility to himself and less damage to the stalks than would be the case if the mixture were carried in buckets in the ordinary manner. The container should be fitted with a broadmouthed cock and an india-rubber tube, by means of which the spraying machines could be filled.

In order to ascertain if any portion of the mixture applied had been absorbed by the leaves or stalks of the plants which had been sprayed, two samples of leaves and stalks, one of which had been treated with the sulphate of copper and lime mixture, and the other with the sulphate of copper, lime, and treacle mixture, were submitted to Sir Charles Cameron for analysis. A sample of potatoes grown on the first mentioned plot, the foliage of which was analysed, was also submitted for analysis ; it will be seen from Sir Charles Cameron's report, that each sample of leaves and stalks absorbed a certain amount of copper, but that the tubers did not contain more copper than might be found in any sample of tubers, the foliage of which had not been so treated.

The very full reports supplied by Sir Charles Cameron will prove of much interest.

REPORT from Sir CHARLES A. CAMERON, M.D., D.P.H. (Cambridge), F.R.C.S.I., M.R.C.P.I., F.I.C., Medical Officer of Health for Dublin, City and County Analyst.

City Laboratory,
Municipal Buildings,
Dublin, November 25th, 1892.

At the request of the Irish Land Commissioners I have carried out the following investigation :—

Specimens of (1) potato stalks, (2) potato leaves which had been treated with solution of sulphate of copper, (3) specimen of potato stalks, and (4) potato leaves which had been treated with sulphate of copper and treacle, were analysed as follows :—

300 grammes (nearly 12ozs.) of each of the above specimens were placed in a porcelain basin under a water tap and thoroughly washed. After four days washing it was considered impossible that the most minute trace of copper sulphate could have remained on the leaves or stalks. The washings were, towards the close of the process, tested for copper by evaporating a large quantity to a minute proportion, and applying to the latter appropriate tests which proved to be negative.

Each specimen after being washed was treated as follows :—It was dried and then burned in a large platinum dish. The specimens were at first charred, allowed to cool and their soluble constituents exhausted by treatment with distilled water. The residue of charred matter was then heated until everything organic and volatile was expelled. To prevent any copper, if present, being volatilised, the blowpipe flame was not applied to the platinum vessel, and the temperature was not raised above dull redness. A greyish ash having been obtained by the incineration of the specimens, the saline matter obtained from the charred masses was added to the grey mass, and the mixture boiled for several hours in dilute pure nitric acid. By this process it was intended to get into solution any copper that might be present in the ash.

Sulphate of copper is soluble in water, but on being calcined in contact with organic matter, the sulphate would be reduced to an insoluble sulphide, or if the temperature were very high, and organic matter present, to metal. The nitric acid solution was next filtered off the insoluble matter associated with it, and concentrated so as to get rid of most of the nitric acid. On diluting the concentrated solution with distilled water, and the addition of ammonia in excess, a bulky precipitate of the oxide of iron, phosphate of calcium, &c., took place. On the subsidence of the precipitate, a blue solution, indicative of the presence of copper, was seen. The solution obtained from the leaves was a much deeper blue than that yielded by the stalks; and the solutions obtained from the specimens treated with sulphate of copper only were of deeper hue than the corresponding solutions obtained from the specimens treated with sulphate of copper and treacle.

The amount of copper in each solution was determined by precipitating it as a sulphide, by transmitting sulphuretted hydrogen gas through the solution. It is unnecessary to mention here all the precautions necessary to be taken to ensure the accuracy of this method of determining the amount of copper in a solution; they were fully observed.

The amount of copper having been ascertained, according to the atomic laws, its equivalent as crystallized sulphate of copper ($CuSO_4$, 5 H_2 O) was calculated.

The quantities of sulphate of copper absorbed by the potato leaves is very great. In those treated with sulphate of copper alone, the quantity amounts to more than two parts per thousand. The stalks have absorbed very much less than the leaves. The presence of treacle materially prevented the absorption of the copper. It is remarkable that sulphate of copper, which is a tolerably soluble salt, should so freely enter into the tissues of the potato leaves, and remain there, notwithstanding that the leaves were under a water tap for four days. No doubt, the copper became fixed or insoluble in the plants.

I mixed sulphate of copper, lime and water, in the proportions in which they were applied to the potatoes, namely, 15 parts of sulphate, 7½ of lime, and 1,500 of water. The lime is much more than sufficient to precipitate the copper, as hydroxide, or hydrated oxide. The excess of lime and the hydrated oxide, precipitate, leaving sulphate of lime in solution. I found that the clear solution did not contain any copper. It is strange how the plants can absorb copper under these circumstances, the hydrated oxide being insoluble. I passed a stream of carbonic acid gas through the suspended oxide of copper, but by this treatment only a minute quantity of the copper went into solution. The rain water which falls on the potatoes contains carbonic acid, which might possibly dissolve a little of the copper oxide and convey it into the plants. In some way, however, the copper finds its way into the plant, no doubt through the stomata or pores. How far it penetrates has yet to be determined. Nor can it be considered as a settled matter that the copper absorbed protects the plant from the ravages of the fungus.

Copper occurs naturally in many food substances, but only in minute quantities. Duclaux states that he detected in 1,000 parts of cocoa beans from 0·009 to 0·04 of copper, and in 1,000 parts of the outer shell, from 0·035 to 0·225 of copper. These are small quantities when compared with the amounts which I have found in the potato leaves.

21st day of December, 1892.

Sir,—I beg to inform you that I have examined for the presence of copper the potatoes which you sent to me for that purpose. I found that using 300 grammes weight of potatoes an almost infinitesimal trace of copper was detected. The quantity found was unweighable, and might have occurred in potatoes not specially treated with sulphate of copper. A much larger amount would be in no wise injurious to health.

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
(Signed), CHARLES A. CAMERON.

The Secretary,
Irish Land Commission.

It appears to be desirable that further experiments should be carried out to obtain information with respect to the following points which are of considerable importance to the practical agriculturalist, viz. :—

(1.) Should the potato plant be sprayed from above only, from below only, or both from above and below?

(2.) Is it sufficient to thoroughly spray the potato plant once only, provided that the dressing be applied when the foliage is fully developed and immediately before the earliest period at which the disease may be expected in the locality?

(3.) How and in what form does the copper contained in the dressing find its way into the tissues of the foliage, and what length of time must elapse after the application of the dressing, in order that the copper may find its way into the tissues of the foliage to any considerable extent?

(4.) Is the potato plant rendered practically disease-proof by the absorption of copper by the tissues of the leaf, even though the rain may have removed all traces of the dressing from the surface of the leaves?

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your obedient Servant,

JOHN H. FRANKS,
Secretary,
Irish Land Commission.

To the Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant,
Dublin Castle.

APPENDIX

TO THE

REPORT OF EXPERIMENTS.

Experiment No. I.

COUNTY KERRY.

Name—DAVID WATSON. Address—Ballysheen, Abbeydorney.

Source of Seed—Imported from Forfar in 1891.

Date of first dressing,	Plot 1 on June 30th. Plots 2, 3, and 4 on July 1st.
Appearance of crop,	Perfectly healthy but not a heavy show of foliage.
Weather at time of application,	June 30th, a little windy. Heavy shower when half through plot 1. July 1st, bright sunny day.
General remarks,	On plot 1 the solution was unintentionally applied at the rate of 300 gallons per acre.
Date of second dressing,	22nd July.
Appearance of crop,	Still quite free from disease; the foliage did not appear to be as heavy on the treated as on the untreated plots.
Weather at time of application,	Fine.
Date of third dressing,	13th August.
Appearance of crop,	On plot 5 every plant was badly attacked by disease. On the four treated plots disease was only observable on two or three spots, and the plants appeared to have greater vitality than those untreated.
Weather at time of application,	Fine, but very windy.
General remarks,	Notwithstanding excessive rain during the whole of the day and night preceding the day on which the third dressing was applied, indications of the previous dressing were still to be observed in the form of a deposit upon the leaves and stalks.

Experiment No. II.

COUNTY KERRY.

Name—W. T. Talbot-Crosbie, Esquire. Address—Ardfert Abbey, Ardfert.

Date of first dressing,	2nd July.
Appearance of crop,	A fine healthy looking crop.
Weather at time of application,	Raining off and on the whole time, sometimes heavily.
General remarks,	A great deal of time and inconvenience was saved, in preparing the solution, by using a water cart, which contained all the water required for dressing 1 acre.
Date of second dressing,	29th July.
Appearance of crop,	The blight was just appearing on the crop; more apparent on the untreated than on the treated plot; otherwise the crop was quite healthy and in flourishing condition.
Weather at time of application,	A very fine day with no wind.
Date of third dressing,	20th August.
Appearance of crop,	Treated plots quite green and many of the plants in flower. Plots 1 and 2 very slightly affected by disease, especially No. 1, on which only a few spots were to be seen. Plots 3 and 4 were not so free from disease as plot 1, but were still quite green in appearance. The untreated plot was a most marked contrast, being quite black with the disease and hardly a green leaf to be seen.
General remarks,	Very heavy rain during portions of the two days following.

On these plots the dressing had, outwardly, as marked an effect on the crop as in any of the other experiments. The results obtained are possibly to a large extent due to variations in the quality of the soil in each plot. Plot 1 was at the base of a slope, plots 2, 3, and 4 were more or less on the slope, whilst plot 5 was on a flat table land above the other plots.

Experiment No. III.

COUNTY CORK.

Name—D. O'Leary, C.T.C. Address—Darara, Clonakilty.

Date of first dressing, . . 6th July.

Appearance of crop, . . A fair healthy crop. Early potatoes, next to the five plots of champions marked out for experiment, were very badly attacked with the blight. Only one spot was noticed on the champions.

Weather at time of application, A heavy shower when about half through the dressing, after which fine.

General remarks, . . . This crop being in lazy beds, each man was made to spray one side of a bed going up the field and the other side returning.

Date of second dressing, . . 27th July.

Appearance of crop, . . The untreated plot badly attacked with the blight. The foliage being, in places, quite discoloured. The four treated plots, although spotted, were quite green and flourishing. The difference between the foliage of treated and untreated was most marked.

Weather at time of application, Very fine.

Date of third dressing, . . 18th August.

Appearance of crop, . . Untreated plot a mass of diseased stalks, and no green leaves to be seen. Treated plots quite green and remarkably free from disease, being only very slightly spotted, and to all appearance still growing.

Yield of Potatoes and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots.

Experiment No. IV.

COUNTY CORK.

Name—M. Donovan. Address—Gullane, Clonakilty.

Date of first dressing, . . 5th July.

Appearance of crop, . . A fine healthy crop, with heavy foliage. Some early potatoes in close proximity were blighted.

Weather at time of application, At first a light drizzly rain, then quite fine.

General remarks, . . . This crop was in lazy beds, the haulms were so big that it was most difficult to carry the solution to the men.

Date of second dressing, . . 26th July.

Appearance of crop, . . Both treated and untreated were spotted by the disease, but it was not so apparent on the untreated plots. There was no difference discernible among the 4 treated plots.

Weather at time of application, Very fine.

Date of third dressing, . . 17th August, plots 1, 3, and 4; 18th August, plot 2.

Appearance of crop, . . The treated plots, although spotted by disease, were quite fresh and green, a few leaves here and there turning yellow from natural decay. On the untreated plot the leaves had been quite destroyed by the blight, leaving the stalks only. There was no difference to be seen between the four treated plots, with the exception that the outside ridge of plot 1 was spotted with the blight more than the rest. This was considered due to its having been next a few ridges of early potatoes which were not dressed.

Yield of Potatoes and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots.

Plot 2 was the only plot next the untreated plot, and the portions dug for purposes of weighing, in both these plots, were within a few feet of one another; plot 3 had been dug before Mr. West visited the farm to test results.

Experiment No. V.

COUNTY WATERFORD.

Name—JOHN HALLEY. Address—Crobally, near Tramore.

Date of first dressing,	11th July.
Appearance of crop,	A magnificent crop; quite healthy and free from disease.
Weather at time of application,	Fine whilst spraying, but windy. Thunderstorm with exceedingly heavy rain, immediately after dressing.
General remarks,	The foliage being very high, close, and matted, it was impossible to carry the mixture in buckets up the drills to the men, who therefore had to return empty to refill the sprayers; this took up considerable time. In the case of heavy foliage like this, the plan adopted was to make each man walk backwards between the drills, spraying one side only of the drills on each side of him. This method prevents the solution being rubbed off on the men's trousers, and ensures the work being more thoroughly done.
Date of second dressing,	3rd August.
Appearance of crop,	Untreated plot badly attacked with the blight. Treated plots only slightly spotted.
Weather at time of application,	Very fine.
Date of third dressing,	23rd August.
Appearance of crop,	Treated plots quite green, with an enormous growth, and very slightly spotted by the blight. On the untreated plot the stalks only were left, the leaves being quite dark and dishevelled from the effects of the disease. The line of demarkation between the treated and untreated plots was most marked.
Weather at time of application,	A dull but fine day.
General remarks,	The foliage of this crop was too dense to allow of underneath spraying to any extent, and was nearly all dressed from above. All the treated plots except one, had been dug before Mr. West visited the farm to test results.

Experiment No. VI.

COUNTY WATERFORD.

Name—WALTER HALLEY. Address—Coolnacapogue, near Tramore.

Source of Seed—Home-grown Champions.

Date of first dressing, . . 12th July.

Appearance of crop, . . A very light crop of potatoes, but quite healthy, and free from disease.

Weather at time of application, Raining off and on the whole time.

Date of second dressing, . . 2nd August.

Appearance of crop, . . Blight appearing on the untreated plot, very few spots to be seen on the four treated plots. The previous dressing was still to be observed upon the leaves.

Date of third dressing, . . 25th August.

Appearance of crop, . . Treated plots quite green, and many of the plants in flower. The upper leaves of a great many plants were slightly spotted with the blight, the lower leaves were quite free from disease, and covered with the previous dressing. This showed that the upper leaves had sheltered the lower ones from the beating action of the rain. Untreated plot quite dark from disease.

Weather at time of application, Bright and sunny.

Experiment No. VII.

COUNTY FERMANAGH.

Name—A. G. West, Esq. Address—Ardunshin, near Brookeboro'.

Date of first dressing, . . . 18th July.

Appearance of crop, . . A fine crop, quite free from the disease.

Weather at time of application, Occasional light showers of rain.

Date of second dressing, . . 8th August.

Appearance of crop, . . Quite free from the disease. The four treated plots appeared fresher, and a darker green colour than the untreated plot. The previous dressing was still to be observed.

Weather at time of application, Very fine, but windy.

Date of third dressing, . . 10th September.

Appearance of crop, . . The untreated plot quite brown with disease, and hardly a green leaf to be seen. Treated plots growing vigorously. Here and there a few plants turning yellow from natural decay.

Experiment

Carried out by Mr. W. A Barnes, at Westland, Moynalty, Kells, County Meath.

Mr. Barnes reported as follows :—

"The weather was very showery at the time the dressings were applied, and therefore I would not place much reliance on the comparative results between the plots dressed with and without treacle. It will be observed that one treacle plot gave the heaviest yield of the four, while the other gave the lowest, this is accounted for by a very heavy shower coming on shortly after the latter had been dressed."

Yield of Potatoes and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots.

Report of Experiment

Conducted by the DUNGANNON BOARD of GUARDIANS, on the Workhouse grounds at Dungannon.

The report was made by Mr. THOMAS TACKABERRY, Workhouse Master, who superintended the experiment.

"The total area of the plots treated on the Workhouse grounds was about $1\frac{1}{2}$ statute acres."

"The area tested by digging and weighing was 44 yards of a 27-inch drill in the dressed plot, from which was obtained 6 stone 2 lb. of marketable potatoes as compared with 4 stone 12 lbs. in the same length of an undressed drill. No notice was taken of the small or black potatoes, which were trifling in both cases. The mixture was applied once, and the time occupied was $1\frac{1}{2}$ days for a man and an attendant. The crop was dressed about the middle of July, the weather being dry and warm at the time."

"The leaves and stalks of the treated potatoes continued green and healthy for about three weeks longer than those of the untreated. Taking into account the fact that the Workhouse grounds are very much worn by continued cropping, I consider the result highly satisfactory."

REPORT, 1893.

Irish Land Commission,
Agricultural Department,
Dublin, June 23, 1894.

Sir,

I have the honour to state for the information of His Excellency the Lord Lieutenant that, in accordance with your instructions, the Agricultural Department of the Irish Land Commission carried out a series of field experiments during the summer and autumn of 1893, for the purpose of further testing the value of applications of a mixture of copper sulphate and lime to the potato plant as a preventive of disease; the experiments were arranged with a view to obtaining information on the following points, as recommended in my report of the experiments conducted in 1892, viz. :—

(1.) Should the potato plant be sprayed from above only, from below only, or both from above and below?

(2.) Is it sufficient to thoroughly spray the potato plant once only, provided that the dressing be applied when the foliage is fully developed and immediately before the earliest period at which the disease may be expected in the locality?

It was further decided to test the efficacy of a mixture containing 2 per cent. of copper sulphate as compared with one containing but 1½ per cent. of copper sulphate.

Districts selected.

The field experiments were carried out under the superintendence of Mr. A. William West, M.R.A.C.: the farms upon which these experiments were conducted were situated on the seaboard of the County Cork, in the district between Clonakilty and Bantry, the experimental plots being in most instances within two miles of the sea; the entire district is one in which potato disease is very prevalent, frequently occurring in a very aggravated form.

Further experiments were conducted by W. A. Barnes, Esq., of Westlands, Moynalty, Kells, County Meath, in accordance with instructions given by this Department. Through the courtesy of Professor Thomas Carroll, of the Albert Farm, Glasnevin, who was kind enough to grant the use of a "Strawson Horse Spraying Machine," the property of the Board of National Education, for the purpose, Mr. Barnes was enabled to spray a portion of his crop with the Horse Spraying Machine, the "Eclair Sprayer" being used for the remainder.

Particulars as to the Experimental Plots.

In order that the experiments should be uniform, and as serviceable as possible to the Irish farmer, the Champion variety of potato only was experimented upon, that being the variety most generally grown for home consumption in Ireland.

At each experimental station eight plots were carefully marked out, and treated as follows :—

Plot I.	Plot II.	Plot III.	Plot IV.	Plot V.	Plot VI.	Plot VII.	Plot VIII.
1½ per cent. mixture.	2 per cent. mixture.	1½ per cent. mixture.	2 per cent. mixture.	1½ per cent. mixture.	2 per cent. mixture.	1½ per cent. mixture.	2 per cent. mixture.
Dressed once from above and below the leaves.		Dressed twice from above and below the leaves.		Dressed twice from above the leaves only.		Dressed twice from below the leaves only.

	Copper sulphate.	Unslaked lime.	Water.
A 2 per cent. mixture consisted of	2 lbs.,	1 lb.,	10 gallons ;
A 1½ per cent. do. do.	1½ lbs.,	¾ lb.,	10 gallons ;

the proportion of lime used was amply sufficient to neutralise all acid and precipitate all the copper.

The experimental plots were each 20 perches in area, except in one set of experiments in which they were very slightly smaller; it would have been extremely difficult to obtain suitable potato fields in the district in which the experiments were carried out of sufficient size to permit of the plots being one rood each in area, otherwise that area would have been adopted.

The first dressings were applied at the latter end of June, and the second dressings about one month later.

Materials used for dressing.

The copper sulphate used was obtained from Mr. Samuel Boyd, of 46, Mary-street, Dublin: a sample of it was analysed by Sir Charles A. Cameron, Analyst to the City and County of Dublin, and certified by him to be commercially "pure." The lime used was well burned, unslaked lime.

Method of preparing the Mixtures used.

The spraying mixtures were prepared as follows :—

The requisite amount of copper sulphate was set to dissolve over night by placing it in a piece of coarse sacking, suspended in a wooden barrel containing two gallons of cold water to every pound of copper sulphate, or if this could not conveniently be done, the copper sulphate was ground to powder previous to being placed in water; when thus powdered it dissolves in a few minutes in cold water; the correct amount of unslacked lime was then placed in a bucket, and water was added until the lime would absorb no more; upon the whole of the lime being thoroughly slacked, sufficient water was added thereto to thoroughly cool the lime, producing a thin milk of lime, which was well stirred and then poured slowly into the copper sulphate solution, this mixture was then stirred for several minutes, after which sufficient cold water was added to dilute it to the required strength, the whole being continuously stirred. After thorough stirring, the mixture appeared azure blue in colour; it was then allowed to rest in order that the precipitate should sink; if after standing for a few minutes the precipitate sank leaving a few inches in depth of clear liquid it was considered ready for use, but if the liquid to the depth mentioned instead of appearing clear was slightly tinged with blue, the mixture was again thoroughly stirred and allowed to rest a second time. This second stirring generally produced the desired effect; but if, as occurred in one or two instances, it did not do so, more lime was added, the bluish tinge showing that the whole of the copper had not been thoroughly precipitated; the addition of a few ounces of lime was found sufficient in each instance to bring about the desired result. On being tested with litmus paper the mixture as thus prepared proved to be free from acidity.

Method of application

The mixture was applied by means of Vermorel's "Eclair" knapsack spraying pumps purchased by this Department in 1891. The machines worked on the whole most satisfactorily, and proved very efficient in every respect; they have now been used for three seasons and the cost of repairs has been trivial.

Amount Mixture applied.

The amount of dressing applied per acre varied from 100 to 160 gallons, in proportion to the quantity of foliage to be treated, the latter amount being applied in the case of experiment No. IX. on account of the rankness of the crop, and because disease had already broken out in the field.

Time occupied in applyi the Mixtures

In each experiment the time occupied in applying the dressing was noted, and the results coincided with those of 1892, three men using "Eclair" sprayers, attended by one boy, applying 150 gallons of the mixture to one statute acre in 5¼ hours.

Appearan of the cr at time o digging.

In the latter end of September the produce of one perch in each plot was carefully dug and weighed: at the time of digging, the tubers in the treated plots were still adhering to the fibrous roots; the haulm on the untreated plots was generally quite withered and dried up; on the plots which had been dressed once only, it was almost in the same condition, but on the plots which had been twice dressed the haulm was still green and succulent, though the leaves had withered away: no appreciable difference was observable in the haulms on the plots dressed (1) from above only, (2) from below only, and (3) both from above and below: on all of the treated plots there was a notable absence of weeds as compared with those untreated, due to greater luxuriance and continuation of growth of the haulms and foliage on the treated plots choking out the weeds, while the untreated haulms having died off early in the season allowed the weeds to have their own way.

Details o Experi- ments.

Details of each series of experiments are given in the Appendix, also a summary showing the estimated value of the produce in each experimental plot: unfortunately in one set of experiments—those conducted on the farm of Dr. Jennings, Marsh Model Farm, Skibbereen, all the plots except two had been dug before Mr. West visited the farm to test results, this set of experiments is therefore omitted from the summary. In those instances in which two untreated test plots were provided, the net gain or loss on each plot has been calculated by comparison with the results on the untreated plot giving the highest return; in several instances it would probably have been more accurate, owing to the conditions of soil, aspect, and culture, to compare results with those obtained on the untreated plot giving the lowest return, but the system of comparison adopted is the least likely to convey to agriculturists an exaggerated notion as to the increased yield obtained by dressings in the experiments reported.

General Remarks

Omitting the experiments on Dr. Jennings' farm, there were nine series of experiments in each of which there were eight treated plots or seventy-two treated plots in all, thirty-six of which were sprayed with a 2 per cent. mixture, and thirty-six with a 1½ per cent. mixture.

Comparis of Result 1½ per ce and 2 per cent. mixture.

A comparison of the results obtained in those plots which were similarly treated with respect to the method and frequency of application, but which varied with respect to the percentage of copper sulphate contained in the mixture applied, indicates that the best results were obtained:—

with a 2 per cent. mixture in 21 cases; with a 1½ per cent. mixture in 15 cases.

The actual plots which gave the highest value in yield in each of the nine sets of experiments had been dressed—

In six instances with a 2 per cent. mixture.
In three instances with a 1½ per cent. mixture.

Comparing the results obtained in each set of experiments by the different systems of application adopted, irrespective of the percentage of copper sulphate contained in the mixture, it appears that the plots giving the highest yield in value in each set of experiments were dressed:—

In two instances, from above and below, on one date only.
In one instance, from above only, } on two separate occasions, at intervals of
In six instances, from below only, } about four weeks.

A comparison of the average returns per acre, of those plots which received similar treatment in each series of experiments, shows that the plots which were sprayed from above and from below, on two distinct occasions, give the best average return.

Comparing the mean results obtained on those plots in each set of experiments, which were treated similarly as to the method of dressing, and number of dressings given, but one of which was dressed with a 1½ per cent. mixture, and the other with a 2 per cent. mixture, it appears that the duplicate plots, giving the highest mean yield in value, were dressed—

In one instance, from above and below, on one date only.
In two instances, from above and below, } on two separate occasions at intervals
In two instances, from above only, } of about four weeks.
In four instances, from below only, }

It would appear therefore that in the case of the Champion variety of potatoes, it is desirable to use a mixture containing 2 per cent. of copper sulphate and to apply the dressing twice at least; probably a mixture containing only 1½ per cent. of copper sulphate would be more suitable for those varieties the foliage of which is more tender than that of the Champion: in no instance did it appear that the foliage had been injured by the strength of the mixture applied.

The experiments conducted by this Department in 1892 also tended to show that in the case of the Champion variety of potato a mixture containing 2 per cent. of copper sulphate was on the whole more efficacious than one containing 1½ per cent. of copper sulphate.

The results obtained from the nine complete series of experiments show that the average increase of yield of sound potatoes on the treated as compared with the untreated plots was 2 tons 13 cwts. 6 lbs. per statute acre, equal to about 4 tons 5 cwts. 105 lbs. per Irish acre, and the average net gain on the treated as compared with the untreated plots was £4 8*s.* 2*d.* per statute acre, equal to £7 2*s.* 9½*d.* per Irish acre. (See Table, page 22.)

In the case of six of the seventy-two sprayed plots, the results showed net losses varying from £1 15*s.* 1*d.* to 1*s.* 1½*d.* per statute acre; in four of the instances referred to, the plots were those which had been sprayed on one occasion only, all the other sprayed plots in the same series of experiments showing marked gains as compared with the results on the untreated plots.

Mr. Barnes reports as follows with respect to the experiments which he carried out:—

Westland, Moynalty, Kells,
December 18th, 1893.

EXPERIMENTS carried out with STRAWSON'S HORSE SPRAYING MACHINE.

Experiments carried out by Mr. Barnes.

This implement did not reach me till 20th July, previous to which the disease had made its appearance here, therefore I do not consider the same beneficial results were obtained as would have been had the dressing been applied sooner.

I believe that the spores of the fungus enter the leaves, and that the mycelium spreads inside some time before there is any outward manifestation of the disease, and that once the interior of the leaf has been invaded no application can be of any use; our main object should therefore be to prevent the entrance of the spores in the first instance.

The machine sent to me was only intended for spraying "from below," and in order to spray "from above only" I had to elevate the jets above the surface of the foliage and point them nearly perpendicularly upwards, by this means I got a cloud of spray which, had the weather been calm, would have fallen evenly on the foliage, but unfortunately, the weather being squally at the time, the spray got blown about, so that some of the drills got hardly any of it while others got more than their share; I therefore do not place much reliance on the results obtained by spraying from above with this implement.

I have lately been informed by the makers that an arrangement can be attached to this machine for spraying from above, but it would be necessary that the operation of spraying from below could be carried out at the same time in order that the machine should not have to travel twice over the same ground. There are certain other desirable modifications which I could suggest, but need not allude to here.

At the time I got the machine the foliage had attained its full growth and had met across the drills, nevertheless there was very little difficulty in getting through the crop, and the injury done was infinitesimal.

Some persons consider that spraying on the top only affords sufficient protection to the leaves, and this proposition I am not prepared to contradict, but assuming it to be true, nevertheless with a horse-sprayer such as this it will be always necessary to spray from below as well as from above whenever the foliage has arrived at any degree of density, as otherwise the upper surface of under leaves could not be reached by the spray, nearly the whole of which would be intercepted by the upper leaves.

I believe that this machine is capable of being made a very serviceable implement.

EXPERIMENTS with the "ECLAIR" SPRAYER.

The application of the copper dressing in these experiments was commenced on 15th July, which was rather late for this year. I believe that the disease had made its appearance in my field some time before it was first noticed, and that some of the leaves had been penetrated by the spores of the fungus before the dressing had been applied. This, I think, is one reason why the increase in the dressed plots over those not treated is considerably less than what it was in 1892, while another reason is that the tubers generally had attained to a larger size this year before the advent of the disease than they had in 1892, consequently the undressed plots show a better yield than in last year.

It will be observed that the plots dressed twice "above" and "below" come out best of all, while those dressed twice "below" show the smallest increase over the untreated plots.

The plots dressed with the 2 per cent. solution of copper come out a shade over those to which the weaker solution had been applied, but the difference is too slight to deduce any inference therefrom.

The foliage on all the dressed plots continued green from three to five weeks after the untreated had withered away, but the difference was not so marked as in 1892.

W. A. BARNES.

To the Secretary,
Irish Land Commission,
Agricultural Department.

It will be noticed that the results obtained by Mr. Barnes in the experiments which he conducted, differ somewhat from those obtained from the Land Commission experiments. In Mr. Barnes' experiments with the horse sprayer the best results were obtained from the plot dressed twice from below and from above; but it should be noted that this plot received twice as much mixture, as did either of the other plots, and the dressings were applied practically at one date, and should therefore be regarded as one dressing, but with double the amount of mixture applied to the other two plots. It should be noted that in this series of experiments the plot dressed with 100 gallons per acre from below only, gave a much better result than the plot dressed with an equal amount per acre from above only.

In Mr. Barnes' experiments with the knapsack sprayer, the results obtained with a mixture containing 2 per cent. of copper sulphate invariably gave a better result than when a 1½ per cent. mixture was similarly applied, thus corroborating the deductions made from the Land Commission experiments: Mr. Barnes obtained the best results from the plot dressed twice from above and below, but it should be noted that this plot received a dressing of 200 gallons per acre in all, while only 100 gallons per acre was applied to each of the other plots which received dressings on two occasions; the latter quantity is rather a small dressing for an average crop with fully developed foliage.

Mr. Barnes estimates the cost of spraying with a horse sprayer, as follows, per day:—

	s.	d.
One horse at . .	5	0
Two men at 2*s.*, . .	4	0
Total, . .	9	0

Mr. Barnes further states that one horse and two men can spray 3 statute acres per day, drawing water and mixing the ingredients, &c. The copper sulphate would cost about 1*s.* 6*d.* per acre, using a 1½ per cent. mixture, the total cost per acre would thus approximate 4*s.* 6*d.* Doubtless the cost of dressing per acre with a horse sprayer would be lessened by employing another man, so that the machine would be kept more constantly at work, thereby getting over a larger area.

On the whole it may be assumed that it is generally the safest course to apply the dressing on two occasions, first, shortly before the earliest period at which the disease is likely to appear in the district, and again about three weeks later; also, that if the dressing is properly applied from below only, it will prove thoroughly efficacious, but that it would perhaps be generally advisable to spray partly from above and partly from below. When the dressing is properly applied from below only, a large proportion of the mixture is sprayed up through the foliage and falls again on the upper surface of the leaves, both the upper and under surfaces of the leaves being thereby covered, but if care is not exercised, the spray will not reach the under surface of the upper leaves, being impeded by the lower leaves.

A further series of experiments was carried out at the Botanic Gardens, Glasnevin, under the direction of Mr. F. W. Moore, M.R.I.A., with a special view to ascertaining :—

(1.) Whether any portion of the copper contained in the dressing finds its way into the tissues of the foliage, and if so, how, and in what form.

(2.) If the plant is rendered practically disease proof by the absorption of copper by the tissues of the leaf, although all traces of the dressing may have been removed by rain.

The analyses made in connection with these experiments were conducted by Sir Charles A. Cameron, Professor of Chemistry, R.C.S.I., who, with Mr. Moore, kindly afforded his valuable advice and assistance in arranging the details of the various experiments.

It is regretted that, owing to various unforeseen circumstances, rendering the data obtained unreliable, the results obtained in these experiments, though carried out with great care, cannot be regarded as reliable ; it is therefore proposed, with the approval of His Excellency, to renew this set of experiments during the present season.

It is satisfactory to be in a position to report that the efforts of the Commissioners to bring home to agriculturists the advantages which would accrue to those whose farms are situated in districts in which potato disease is almost annually prevalent, have not been without good results, a considerable number of spraying machines having been supplied to private individuals in those districts in which the experiments were carried out in 1892.

A number of applications have been made to the Commissioners to have experiments carried out during the ensuing season, in districts in which hitherto farmers have had no opportunity of observing the method of application and the results to be obtained thereby ; it is therefore proposed, with the permission of His Excellency, to select a suitable district in which, during the ensuing season, practical demonstrations may be given to farmers in approved methods of spraying with knapsack sprayers.

A copy of a leaflet containing " Instructions for the Application of Sulphate of Copper and Lime Mixture to the Potato Plant," issued by this Department, in the summer of 1893, in accordance with your instructions, is contained in the Appendix : the instructions contained in the leaflet refer to the preparation of a mixture containing 2 per cent. of copper sulphate.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

JOHN H. FRANKS,

Secretary,

Irish Land Commission.

To the Under-Secretary to the Lord Lieutenant,

Dublin Castle.

TO THE

REPORT OF EXPERIMENTS.

Experiment No. I.

COUNTY CORK.

Name—Mathew Sullivan. Address—Youghals, near Clonakilty.

Date of first dressing, . . 21st June.
Appearance of crop, . . A good healthy crop in lazy beds, quite free from disease.
No. of gallons applied per acre, 100.
Weather at time of application, Fine and sunny.
Date of second dressing, . . 20th July.
Appearance of crop, . . Grown rather rank, both the treated and untreated plots almost entirely free from disease.
No. of gallons applied per acre, 100.
Weather at time of application, Fine, but dull.

Yield of Potatoes and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots, marketable Potatoes being valued at £2 per ton and small Potatoes at £1 per ton.

Experiment No. III.

COUNTY CORK.

Name—Jeremiah Callaghan. Address—Cahirmore, Rosscarbery.

Date of first dressing, . . . 23rd June.

Appearance of crop, . . A fine crop with heavy foliage, in lazy beds; apparently free from disease.

No. of gallons applied per acre, 150

Weather at time of application, Fine and sunny, but very windy.

Date of second dressing, . . 22nd July.

Appearance of crop, . . Very rank. Treated plots looking quite healthy and scarcely a spot of blight to be seen. Untreated plot heavily attacked with the disease.

No. of gallons applied per acre, 120.

Weather at time of application, At first fine, but dull, after which a heavy sea mist fell.

General remarks, ... This crop grew so very rank that in order that the second dressing might be applied, boys had to walk in front of the men spraying, spreading apart the haulms with their hands.

Yield of Potatoes and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots, marketable Potatoes being valued at £2 per ton, and small Potatoes at £1 per ton.

Experiment No. VII.

COUNTY CORK.

Name—WILLIAM ATTERIDGE. Address—Schull.

Date of first dressing, . . 30th June.
Appearance of crop, . . A very fine crop in lazy beds, a few spots of blight were to be seen.
No. of gallons applied per acre, 144.
Weather at time of application, Fine and sunny; heavy rain fell during the following night.
Date of second dressing, . . 27th July.
Appearance of crop, . . Treated plots slightly spotted with blight, but quite green and growing very rank. The plots dressed with 2 per cent. solution appeared a little freer from blight than those dressed with 1½ per cent. solution. The untreated plots were very badly affected.
No. of gallons applied per acre, 144.
The plots were situated on the slope of a hill on one side of Schull Bay; from the other side of the Bay, a distance of nearly one mile, the treated plots could easily be distinguished from the untreated.

YIELD of POTATOES and Estimated Value of the Produce, deducting the cost of Preventive Treatment, calculated per statute acre, from the Results obtained upon the Experimental Plots, marketable Potatoes being valued at £2 per ton, and small Potatoes at £1 per ton.

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT.

POTATO DISEASE

Instructions for the Application of Sulphate of Copper and Lime Mixture to the Potato Plant for the prevention of Potato Disease by the means of "Knapsack Sprayers."

1. The dressing should be applied about a fortnight before the earliest period at which disease has been known to make its appearance in the locality; the period of application in Ireland would therefore vary from the beginning of June in early districts to the latter end of July in late districts.

2. The dressing should be applied by means of a spraying machine, specially constructed for the purpose of throwing a fine mist-like spray, with which the foliage of the potato plant should be covered. Many spraying machines are sold, suitable for horse and hand power—the "Strawson" and "Eclair" knapsack sprayers, costing 35*s.* each, have proved very satisfactory; they can be worked by one man, and can be procured through any dealer in agricultural implements. Knapsack sprayers are the most suitable for use on small areas; the following instructions have been prepared on the assumption that such sprayers will be used.

Preparation of the Mixture.

3. To prepare twenty-five gallons of the mixture, the quantity which one man can apply to an ordinary crop in three hours with a knapsack sprayer:—

(a.) Put twenty gallons of cold water into a wooden tub or cask—an empty paraffin barrel, with the head taken off, will suit admirably—and put five gallons of cold water into another vessel.

(b.) Take five pounds of powdered copper sulphate (if the copper sulphate is not powdered, break it fine with a hammer); put the copper sulphate into a piece of coarse sacking, and suspend the sacking in the vessel containing twenty gallons of water so that the copper sulphate may readily dissolve in the water; the powdered copper sulphate should dissolve in about fifteen minutes; it may be stirred frequently to promote dissolution.

(c.) Put 2½ lbs. of freshly burned, pure, unslaked lime into a vessel, add sufficient water thereto from the vessel containing five gallons of water to slake the lime; when the lime is thoroughly slaked add enough water from the five-gallon vessel to thoroughly cool the lime, thus producing a thin milk of lime, then pour any water remaining in the five-gallon vessel into the twenty-gallon vessel containing the copper sulphate.

(d.) When the copper sulphate has been completely dissolved, stir it well with a stick and then pour the milk of lime slowly into the copper sulphate solution, stirring the whole continuously, and continue stirring for five minutes; the mixture should then appear azure blue in colour; the mixture should then be allowed to rest for five minutes; after resting for five minutes the liquid should appear perfectly clear for a few inches in depth, the clearness of the liquid can be tested by holding a piece of white paper a few inches below the surface; if instead of appearing clear the liquid to the depth mentioned is slightly tinged with blue, slack four ounces of lime as before, add it to the mixture and stir thoroughly again, repeating this process if necessary until the upper portion of the liquid appears clear after having been allowed to rest for a few minutes, the mixture being then ready for use.

4. Prepare whatever quantity of the above mixture may be required, using the ingredients in the following proportions, namely:—

20 lbs. of copper sulphate.
10 lbs. of lime.
100 gallons of water

The copper sulphate may be left in solution for a considerable period, but the lime water should be freshly made and added to the copper sulphate solution immediately before use.

Application.

5. Stir the mixture thoroughly, then fill the cylinder of the knapsack sprayer, using a wooden or copper vessel for the purpose; the operator should then strap the machine on his back, and proceed to dress the crop, working the sprayer according to the directions sent out with each machine: the operator should walk slowly between the drills or lazy beds, and thoroughly spray the plants on each side from below and from above, pumping with one hand so as to maintain a steady pressure, and directing the nozzle with the other hand so as to throw the spray over every portion of the plants; if the foliage is very rank, meeting across the drills, the operator should walk backwards to avoid brushing the mixture off the plants with his clothes.

6. Important matters to be attended to:—

1. Spray during dry weather, so that the mixture may remain on the foliage; if heavy rain falls within six hours after spraying, it would be desirable to spray again on the first favourable opportunity.

2. Use only pure copper sulphate, guaranteed to be of 98 per cent. purity; buy it powdered, or powder it before use; ordinary commercial sulphate of copper contains a large amount of sulphate of iron, and should not be used. Pure copper sulphate costs about 3*s*. per stone when purchased in small quantities, and can be obtained from the leading druggists.

3. If the sulphate of copper is impure, and contains much sulphate of iron, the mixture when prepared will appear greenish or brownish, instead of being deep azure blue in colour.

4. Take care that the lime used is pure, well burnt, and unslacked.

5. Cold water should invariably be used in preparing the mixture; hot water should not be used. The lime, after being slacked, should be quite cool before being added to the copper sulphate solution; it may be cooled by adding cold water.

6. Iron vessels should not be used in preparing or handling the mixture—wooden or copper vessels should be used for such purposes.

7. Empty paraffin barrels have been found very suitable for the preparation of the mixture; it will generally be found most convenient to prepare the mixture in the field in which it is to be used.

8. The mixture should be well stirred with a stick or piece of wood on each occasion before a fresh supply is drawn for the spraying machines.

9. The spraying machines should be oiled before being used: as there is a good deal of india-rubber in the working parts of the "Eclair," pure olive oil should be used for lubricating: ordinary machine oil should be avoided, as it frequently contains paraffin, which dissolves india-rubber.

10. One man attended by a boy can apply about nine or ten gallons of dressing with a knapsack spraying machine in one hour. One boy can attend three men using knapsack sprayers, carrying fresh supplies of dressing to them.

11. The quantity of the mixture to be applied per acre is approximately as follows—the mixture when prepared costing about one halfpenny per gallon:—

	Per Statute Acre.	Per Irish Acre.
For an average crop of champions with fully developed foliage, ...	100 gallons.	160 gallons.
For a crop of champions with more than the average amount of foliage, ...	150 gallons.	240 gallons.
For a crop of champions with a small development of foliage, ...	80 gallons.	130 gallons.

12. When dressing potato plants which are very young, or of tender-leaved varieties, it would be desirable to weaken the mixture by the addition of one-third more water than the quantity specified in the instructions given above.

13. Sulphate of copper being a poison, the vessels in which the mixture is prepared should not afterwards be used for holding food or drink for animals.
